The Winn Feline Foundation enhances the relationship between cats and humans by fostering improvements in feline health through research and education.

Winn funds medical studies to improve the health and well-being of all cats. More than $6 million has been awarded in grants that have changed cats’ lives. Winn also sponsors an annual symposium on feline health topics for veterinarians, technicians, breeders and cat lovers, co-sponsors international veterinary conferences, and publishes articles that educate veterinarians and the public about feline health.

So much of what we know about feline health has changed, and Winn has been at the forefront, uncovering new information, stimulating interest in the veterinary community, and getting the word out to every cat owner. Winn’s web site and blog focusing on feline health studies worldwide, winnfelinefoundation.org and winnfelinefoundation.org/education/cat-health-news-blog, are important resources that help keep cat lovers and veterinarians informed about the most recent news in cat care.

Every cat, every day benefits from Winn-funded research.

I want to remember my cat.
